Excellence in scholarship, a commitment to diversity, and community service are the hallmarks of the Fulbright Program. In 1946, as the junior senator from Arkansas, J. William Fulbright introduced legislation to start a new international educational exchange program with an ambitious goal – to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries. The Fulbright Program now operates in more than 155 countries and has supported approximately 360,000 students and scholars.
Visiting Research Chair in War and Peace Studies

Conduct Research at the Fulbright Scholarship:

- US$25,000

Norwich University welcomes a Fulbright Visiting Research Chair in War and Peace Studies with expertise in any of the following disciplines: International Relations, Military History, Diplomacy, Military Sociology or Cyber Warfare.

Resident in the newly-formed College of Liberal Arts, the Fulbright Visiting Research Chair will conduct research, guest lecture at the undergraduate level, and support the missions of both the Department of History and Political Science’s Studies in War and Peace Program and the College of Graduate and Continuing Studies’ Military History, Diplomacy or Information Assurance Programs. The Chair will have opportunities to participate in public lectures, attend conferences, and otherwise contribute to the intellectual life at Norwich University. Implementation of this Research Chair position is in direct support of Norwich’s commitment to further expand the stature of the institution and to bolster the strength of the intellectual environment of Norwich University.

As the United States’ oldest private military college, and the birthplace of the Reserve Officers’ Training Corps, the Norwich campus comprises a population of approximately 1500 cadets, 500 civilian students, and 120 tenure-track faculty. Founded in 1819, Norwich University is located in idyllic Northfield, Vermont, 230 km south of Montreal and 280 km north of Boston.
